

Additional material collected in a type locality of Pelias magnifica (Tuniyev et Ostrovskikh, 2001) expands our current understanding of the external morphology of the species (including its color polymorphism), its preferred habitats and daily activity. A rapid assessment of the current population status was done.